POCKTLEDA, Misamis—Jenel later gave birth to a baby boy the month before her 18th birthday though she was not destined to become just another teenage mother.

The month, she knew. While being admitted to the hospital, she pulled her nurse closer to her and whispered into her ear. The nurse would later repeat the girl's words to comfort her family as their worst fears were realized a day after Jenel's baby was born.

"She said the nurse, 'This close, I did what I was supposed to. My baby is going to get born safe,'" said Dennis Philip, Jenel's mother.

FUGITIVE retired Army Maj. Gen. Jovito Palparan Jr. has finally found succor and comfort from among his own.

The organization of the country's past and present military and police generals has called for a halt to the "hush trial by publicity" of Palparan who carries a $500,000 bounty on his head, even as they urged him to face the kidnapping charges for the 2006 disappearance of two University of the Philippines student activists.

The Association of General and Flag Officers Inc. (Agfo) yesterday denounced Palparan's prosecution in the media as a "hush trial" when he has neither been tried nor convicted by a court.

'PH rises from grave of corruption'

By Norman Bardadera and Christine Amelante

WITH 2011 drawing to a close, President Aquino said the country has risen from the grave of corruption and poverty during the war-and-a-half-year of his administration, and claimed a raft of achievements, including substantial savings of P42 billion, creation of 2.1 million new jobs and the development of a secret aquatic product for export that he could not name just yet.

Mr. Aquino said the country has emerged for the better under his watch as he was able to bring back the people's faith in the justice system.

"Let us compare the present to the times past... we have returned the blackhole of Lady Justice. Prosperity is blossoming not just the rich and powerful but also the majority of our people," he said in his New Year message that he delivered in

'Next Chief Justice will be the best'

By Christian Arcandito and Martin Rances

PRESIDENT Aquino invited the nation that the next Chief Justice will be the "best" for the country and will be "no lapdog."

In an ANC interview before Christmas Day, the President took time with Aquino's recent speech where the latter dismissed him as a supposedly wanting to appoint a new Chief Justice that he could hold by the seat.

The President told ANC to share Aquino's words that in the search for a new Chief Justice his criteria would not include that the candidate follows Palace orders.

"Creating a lapdog in our seat has never been part of the concept that exists in our family," he said at the end of the interview. "I agree I would like to be able to look at any of our countrymen and say: 'This is the best.'"

Mr. Aquino also mentioned why his administration wanted a change in the leadership of the Supreme Court, currently headed by incumbent Chief Justice Renato Corona.

He said it was wrong for any branch of government to be "unaccountable."

"I never thought I'd go into this (and I never) from Antonio's lecture into what quite a long

Corona's impeachment trial, he said, was a "step towards the Constitution, which is not a conflict of interest."

Meanwhile, Supreme Court administrator and spokesperson Jose Milan Marquero yesterday criticized President Aquino for being "personophoric and arrogant" in ordering his legal advisers to look for a would-be successor to Chief Justice Corona.

In a press briefing, Marquero reiterated Malabanan that the Constitution explicitly states that only the Judicial and the Council JSC, was authorized to screen and select candidates for the position of the high tribunal.

No vacancy in SC

"Let's not be too presumptuous and arrogant. There is no vacancy. On the Supreme Court, I think that's very clear," Marquero said yesterday.

"Perhaps we can practice some degree of humility. Looking at how others are not looking at us," he added.

On Tuesday, Marquero's spokesperson Roberto Tancada said the President had directed his legal team to find possible replacements for Corona, who was impeached by the House of Representatives on Dec. 12.

Tancada said his administration's stance of the likes of Marquero, "referring to himself Justice Ma. Lourdes Sereno, the President's first appointee to the high court and one of the dissenting votes in the recent Supreme Court decision to allow former President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo to leave the country.

A former national president of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines (IBP), lawyer Jose Gargala, yesterday said the search for Corona's replacement even before the Senate could start the impeachment trial seemed "not proper." Gargala, however, agreed a discussion along with other legal luminaries in support of the impeachment process because "it is not a public service in a vacuum."

But Sen. Dingeloy-Romano was at odds with President Aquino's search for Corona's replacement. Mr. Aquino had the "preference" to have a short list of prospective candidates for Chief Justice in the event Corona was ousted, he said.

Herman said a bigger concern was whether or not his Aquino had a clear plan and vision for the country. "I hope he has a clear plan, where to bring all this little things,"

House leaders were more forthcoming in their support for President Aquino. With reports from Christian Arcandito and Ed Celibagayon

Don't expect riveting trial like Erap's—Joker

THE JOKER: says he expects that if Corona's impeachment trial of Chief Justice Renato Corona would be as riveting as that of former President Joseph Estrada, a remote shot possibility.

"The trial will not be as fun as Erap's impeachment trial," said Sen. Joker Arroyo in a phone interview with Inquirer.

"Erap's case was clearly questions of fact while (the trial of Corona) would involve mostly questions of law," he said.

He added that in the Corona impeachment trial, the witnesses would be mostly lawyers and not the public. "There are more legal questions than evidence," Arroyo said.

Gov't permits used for illegal logs

ZAMBOANGIA CITY—At least three logging companies have been using timber licenses to illegally cut trees in Lanas del Sur, according to the highest ranking officer in charge of the Zamboanga Region in Mindanao (ARMM).

Major Assistant, acting ARMM governor, said these companies have been issued Integrated Forest Management Agreements (IFMA) in affiliation of Lanas del Sur.

IFMA is a contract through which government allows private firms in developing and manage tree plantations. Firms with IFMA are also allowed to harvest trees specified in their contracts which have life span of 25 years.

But Benjamin, who served as investigation into illegal logging activities in the region following the Dec. 27 tragedy that killed the people of the cities of Cagayan de Oro and Iligan in two buses, said IFMA were being used to illegally harvest trees in the forests of Sagayan, Iligan and Misamis.

He said he submitted these firms ARMM environmental secretary—Jesse Rando Reyes, Environmental Institute and Urban, Integrated—so to explain how IFMA became instruments of disaster in the region.

"They must explain why they allowed several companies to operate and log in some areas using the IFMA," Benjamin said.

Several leaders of ARMM have issued orders banning logging in the five provinces region but a few of the country's power and forest reserves.

When he received other news reports, Benjamin's first move was to prohibit the issuance of new logging licenses and the construction of existing ones in the region.

Dec. 23 was by without the flood, which would have been the people of Cagayan de Oro and Iligan, two cities that took the brunt of floods at the height of Tropical Storm "Sendong."

Though not surprised, Father P. P. P. was not surprised by the group's decision to forgo the annual dinner and instead donate the money that they would have spent on it to the victims of the storm.

Instead of the usual Christmas dinner, the group that leads the P. P. P. group's annual dinner made a decision.

"It was very moving to see members of the church gathered here again at this time," said Father P. P. P. "They gave up something that was precious to them."

This city's officials passed a resolution that would allow P. P. P. to use the money.

He knew and other cities in the province also decided to give a total of P100,000, according to Mayor Daniel Linares of Iligan.

The cities that gave money were Cebu, Zamboanga, Iloilo, Davao, and Cagayan de Oro.

Letting the school come to the poor

By Marko Geron

STA ROSA CITY—It's almost everything a classroom should be—writing desks, plastic chairs, storybooks, cereals, a chalkboard, a teacher who writes on the chalkboard, and students who get their hands on the back of their heads for every correct answer.

Except that the class is being held under a bridge, in a tent or in a basketball gymnasium.

Three, each week, employees from the barangay health office (BHO) Tuguepao have run the poor communities to their village. They bring with them classroom and instructional materials loaded in a barangay printed vehicle and sell the materials on time as "in-progress classroom."

The project of Barangay Tuguepao is called the School on Wheels to Reconnect Education to the Poor (SOWREP).

"If they can't come to school, let the school come to them," said Marlene Reyes, 35, the village chief of Tuguepao.

Reyes, a retired teacher who also runs a private school in this city, said the project started when she observed lower pupils missing each year in the government day-care center.

"Some parents say they could not pay for the tuition and fees at the day-care center. Others, who live far from the day-care center, could not afford the transport to bring their children to school," she said.

In July 2009, the Barangay Health Office of Tuguepao identified the areas where more children live. Children, ages 3-5, who have not attended day-care center were enrolled in the program.

Riverbank

Now in Barang classes are held in five locations—the Zamboanga compound in Purok 4-A, Dugang 18A in Purok 6-B, Reproductive Subdivision and Amihan Village, both in Purok 3, and in Tuguepao Subdivision in Purok 3.

Reyes said if barangay multipurpose halls in the area are not available, they pick areas in basketball courts or in a private garage. In one location, they set up the chalkboard, tables and chairs near the riverbank.

Each class has an average of 20 students for a total of 100 children enrolled in the program this year.

Reyes said, 20, said she received information from her son, James Ryan, 3, when the boy started attending the day-care center.

"He became more sociable with the other kids and was happy at home," she said.

She said James Ryan was always excited about attending the class "he would dress himself up and remain, 'tuguepao' to all they're here whenever he sees them sitting up the children."

She lives five along the Philippine National Highway work in their area, the classroom is held under the bridge.

Reyes said they could not afford to send James Ryan to a government school from the time to Tuguepao her husband's working of 2000 a day being seasonal construction jobs is not enough for their food.

Human development

Under the program, the younger children are given with play activities while the 5-year-olds are taught lessons on the alphabet and numbers.

The barangay office has hired Leah Alvarez, a private school teacher, and assigned barangay health workers to assist her.

After every class, the children line up to wash their hands from a jug of water the barangay volunteers carry with them. Before this, they are given snacks of biscuits and drinks and are taught to pray before meals.

Reyes said the law in Barang is a human development program not only for the children but also for the parents.

"While the children attend the class, the mothers are also included on one side for seminars on health, child care, and life-based such as egg and candle-making," she said.

Reyes said the program has been sustained through a partnership with private institutions that donated the instructional materials and food.

For instance, the Library Club, a student group from Reyes's school, Holy Rosary College, now donated notebook paper into new ones and donated them to the law to Reyes.

The law to Reyes is the second project submitted by Barangay Tuguepao as a first project program to the Mayor's Office of the Department of Education and Local Government.

In 2009, Barangay Tuguepao launched its Adapt-It program, which served as a center, turned into a Tuguepao into vegetable garden and material recovery facilities. The initiative was later replicated in other villages in the city.

The law to Reyes, Reyes said, corresponds to the mandatory kindergarten education of the Department of Education (DepEd). Barangay officials currently arrange with DepEd officials to consider the multiple classroom program as an optional kindergarten course to prepare children for admission in Grade 1 in local schools.

A NCBIL concept is being education to those dependent on poverty welfare in Sta. Rosa City, covering all the immediate vicinity of all the city's villages. During one class held under a bridge, teacher Leah Alvarez guides in front of at least 20 pupils enrolled in the program called SOWREP. (PHOTO BY JON RANSDELL)

Foreign arrivals this year top 2010 figures, says immigration bureau

By Jerome Aring

MORE than 2.5 million foreigners visited or entered the country this year, the Bureau of Immigration (BI) reported yesterday.

They arrived at different ports of entry but mostly at those at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport, the country's premier port.

David and the assistant would climb further up the figures and include arrivals from Dec. 21 to 31.

He said the year's arrivals included tourists, investors, expatriates, students and business people (those of Filipinos were 100% with foreign passports).

The immigration bureau said the number of foreign arrivals rose sharply this year, when compared to last 2010 by foreign governments warning their citizens against going to the Philippines due to terror threats. Last July, the United States issued another travel advisory against the Philippines, warning of deadly terror attacks.

During 33 immigration interviews, chief Danilo Almada said that, based on the statistics, the authorities "did not see danger foreigner" advised in the Philippines.

Almada also said that in the same period, remaining Filipinos this year to more than 7.4 million. Statistics showed that there were 707,000 Americans, 373,333 Japanese, 277,703 Chinese, 175,544 Australians, 131,696 Taiwanese, 115,337 Koreans, 129,802 Canadians, 94,541 Malaysians and 97,329 Hongkongers.

POLICE WARNING FOR INTERNET BUYERS

Beware of stolen cars sold online

By DQ Yap

BE VERY careful when buying or selling cars, or anything for that matter, on the Internet.

The Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) of the Philippine National Police warned the public on Tuesday about a syndicate selling stolen vehicles through a popular classified ads website.

The CIDG said it arrested a number of the syndicate in an enforcement operation in the parking lot of Nordea Tower on Tandang Sora, Quezon City. The syndicate is allegedly operated by a Chinese Filipino.

Melvin S. Malinao, a 30-year-old resident of Angono, Marikina, was caught in the act of selling a black Honda Civic 2000 to a buyer. He was believed to have been stolen, CIDG Director General Panganiban said in a statement.

The police operation was based on a complaint filed by Roberto Arce Magpangay, 22, a businessman from Pasig City who reported to the CIDG the theft of his brown Honda Civic 2000 on Dec. 18 at Taguig by the hand of Go.

Malinao said the man Go is known to him and posted an online ad to sell his car. Go, he said, called him up and they agreed to meet at a location near the vehicle. That when they stopped at a fast food restaurant in Taguig City, he drove off with his car, the complainant said.

Two days after the incident, Malinao and CIDG investigation searched through online posts, an online buy-and-sell site, to see if Go could be traced to sell the Honda Civic.

Instead, they came across an ad for a black Honda Civic 2000 being sold by Eric Go, whose contact number was the same as Go's when he called Malinao, the CIDG said.

Go was also selling several sports utility vehicles on the buy-and-sell site.

Being so aware, CIDG, again, made a deal with Go who agreed to meet them at Nordea Tower. Instead of Go, however, Malinao showed up, leading to his arrest and the confiscation of the black Honda Civic.

Malinao, who said Go was his "son," showed in a separate document in the case but these turned out to be spurious upon verification, the CIDG said.

Malinao said the black Honda Civic was sold in a buy-and-sell site in Taguig City but he turned on the case was arrested. The CIDG learned the black Honda Civic was registered to another businessman in Marikina.

Changes of car title, indication of documents and robbery-related were filed against Malinao while the CIDG is still working to arrest the leader of the group.

Firemen's prompt response saves family of five

THICK smoke means firefighters as they prepare to enter a building on Bessborough, Manassas Park, where a fire broke out in a laboratory that on the second floor. The fire, which was put out in less than an hour, did not cause any injuries or deaths although patients in a hospital nearby the building had to be moved out because of smoke.

By Mike Colajaco

RESPONDING firefighters arrived just in the nick of time to save a family of five who were trapped inside a building building beside Manassas Park Hospital before anyone was hurt.

"If we [had] arrived a five-minute later, all of them would have died of suffocation," says manassas park fireman Thomas and is a phone interview.

Survived from certain death were August Fabiani, 34, his wife Virginia, 36, and their three children identified as Isabella, 10, Christopher, 4, and Victoria, 2.

The family lives in Bessborough but have been temporarily staying at Johnson Laboratory Clinic, which is located on the second floor of a two-story establishment beside Manassas Park Medical Center on front street.

At 1:40 a.m., receiving a fire alarm call in the clinic which is owned by Johnson's center, started by the smoke, the family rushed out, only to realize that they were trapped because the gate which served as the only way in and out of the building had been padlocked. The key on the other hand, was inside the burning clinic.

The family showed for help as the smoke began to reach them.

"Good thing we arrived within 10 minutes because the fire started was just a few meters away. Had we gotten there late, we would have smothered some of us," Fabiani said.

Firefighters opened the gate by force, rescued the family and took them to the hospital.

The firefighters reached the third story was put out at 2:35 a.m. But while firefighters were battling the flames, patients in Manassas Park Medical Center had to be evacuated to a back black smoke engulfed the facility.

Johnson and Manassas Park Medical Center have been heavily hit by the smoke and immediately notified the state.

Firefighters, however, it, intended to control the spread of the flames of fire protection, disabled the clinic under control.

Johnson is still trying to determine what caused the fire at. Though they suspect that it was probably due to faulty electrical wiring as the building was old and dilapidated.

Damage to property was valued at around $100,000.

'Firecrackers bad for your pets, too'

By Jayme T. Gaud

HERE'S another reason for not using fireworks to celebrate the end of the New Year—they pose a risk not only to your health but also to your pet's.

Environmental group, the White Goldfish moved this reminder yesterday as it reports that fireworks in the heart of the New Year to celebrate their opposition to the use of fireworks in the New Year.

"Visuals captured last at the shape of animals, the White Goldfish moved this reminder yesterday as it reports that fireworks in the heart of the New Year to celebrate their opposition to the use of fireworks in the New Year.

"The New Year's week is like a veritable battlefield for cats, dogs and other animals whose ears are far more sensitive than humans'—they are subjected to ear-splitting, acrid, burning fire, and," says the group's spokesperson.

According to the group, fireworks explosions may cause "accidental trauma" to animals whose sense of hearing is at least 10 times more sensitive than humans.

The resulting panic also opens the animals to trauma or make them nervous to return.

The group pointed out that fireworks can be dangerous to pets, especially if they are left alone in the house.

On Monday, Bessborough said that she had a dog named "Bessborough" who was injured by fireworks in the New Year.

Cheetah of 'Tarzan' films dies

WASHINGTON—Cheetah, the cheetahs that starred in the "Tarzan" films of the 1930s, has passed away at the age of 80, according to the Florida sanctuary where he had lived for some 30 years.

"It is with great sadness that the community has lost a dear friend and family member on Dec. 29, 2011," the sanctuary president, Patricia J. Hinkle, said.

Cheetah had performed in "Tarzan the Ape Man" (1932) and "Tarzan and His Mate" (1934), both starring Johnny Weissmuller as the jungle ranger and Maureen O'Sullivan as Jane.

The cheetah, who arrived at the sanctuary in 1980, lived in a large enclosure with other cheetahs and a large pond.

"Cheetah was a very special animal, and we will miss his presence," Hinkle said.

He was found by a hunter in the 1930s and was brought to the United States by a hunter.

Iran threatens to stop shipments of Gulf oil

TEHRAN—Iran threatened on Tuesday to stop the flow of oil through the Strait of Hormuz if foreign sanctions were imposed on its crude exports over its nuclear ambitions, a move that could trigger military conflict with economies dependent on Gulf oil.

Western sanctions with Iran have increased since a first, it is reported by the UN nuclear watchdog, saying Tehran appears to have worked on designing an atomic bomb and may still be pursuing research to that end, Iran strongly denies this and says it is developing nuclear energy for peaceful purposes.

Iran has already expanded nuclear activity despite four rounds of UN sanctions imposed since 2003 over its refusal to accept an absolute nuclear no-pose and open up to UN nuclear inspectors and inspectors.

Many diplomats and analysts believe only sanctions targeting Iran's oil exports will force it to change course, but Tehran and China—its main crude oil customer—have blocked such a move at the United Nations.

Iran's warning, on Tuesday, came three weeks after EU lawmakers decided to tighten sanctions over the UN watchdog report, said analysts for a possible embargo on oil from the world's No. 2 crude exporter.

"If they (the UN) impose sanctions on Iran, oil exports, there will be no stop of oil exports from the Strait of Hormuz," the official Iranian news agency IRNA quoted Iran's Foreign Minister Mohammad Khatami as saying.

The UN State Department said it was "convinced of Iran's" threat but underscored that the United States would support the free flow of oil.

"It's unclear whether it is a threat or a promise," the State Department said. "We are not sure if it is a threat or a promise."

Mass protests in Syria as Arab League monitors arrive

The pullback on Tuesday was the first sign the regime was coming to terms with the large-scale protests in the 14-month-old crackdown on newly elected and peaceful protesters.

The mass, unarmed protests have been going on since the start of the crackdown, with the regime using force to suppress them. The UN has been monitoring the situation.

Yemen's Saleh causes headaches for Obama

WASHINGTON—The Obama administration is weighing an unprecedented diplomatic effort to pressure Yemen's President Ali Abdullah Saleh to step down.

American officials were consulting on Tuesday on whether to request from Yemeni lawmakers and lawmakers to force Saleh to step down.

Saleh has said he plans to remain in the United States for medical treatment for injuries suffered in a June 2011 protest in Sana'a.

The Obama administration was trying to ensure that Saleh was not only for medical care and not to plan to stay in the US.

Washington's foreign policy is to ensure that Saleh was not only for medical care and not to plan to stay in the US.

Import growth slows on weak demand

By Rita T. Ochoaño

NSO: Trade deficit in 1st 10 months reached $9.23B

PHILIPPINE imports in October rose 2.3 percent from that of a year ago, the weakest growth rate since May, as imports of key electronic items fell by a fifth, government data showed.

The National Statistics Office (NSO) said that in October imports reached $5.617 billion from the $4.994 billion posted in the same month last year. However, there was a month-on-month drop by 1.3 percent from the $5.876 billion seen in September (B11).

Meanwhile, total trade in October 2011 amounted to $9.147 billion—a 6 percent drop from the $9.693 billion posted in the same month last year.

Balance of trade in goods registered a deficit of $952 million, higher than last year's deficit of $136.68 million. The largest for 10-month deficit is $9.23 billion, the NSO reported.

"Overall growth of imports is slower because of the slower economy. Philippine exports are import-dependent. This is especially true for electronics exports," Benjamin E. Dantes of the 19 School of Economics said in a text message.

Did L. Thomas of the University of Asia and the Pacific said weak domestic and global demand had dampened foreign exports and this resulted in "weak importations of production inputs and even finished products."

Factory output in October plunged 6.3 percent—the biggest drop since in 2007, NSO data showed.

Electronics, which made up about a fourth of the imports in October, declined by 19.6 percent to $1.23B billion from the $1.542 billion reported in the same month last year.

SMC said to be a step closer to sealing PAL deal

By Derly C. Domingo and Paolo G. Platonillo

RAY MONTOR Corp. has gone on record to say that negotiations are under way for the acquisition of a minority stake in stocks of the carrier Philippine Airlines, which is currently controlled by the group of tycoon Lucio Tan.

But in a separate disclosure yesterday, PAL general manager, PAL Holdings Inc., denied any such negotiation had taken place.

"We confirm that the company was invited by Mr. Lucio Tan, the controlling stockholder of PAL Holdings Inc., to participate and assist in the exploring and modernization of the assets of Philippine Airlines in preparation for the projected heavy influx of tourists in the coming years, which will be beneficial to the tourism industry of the country," Ray MONTOR president said in its disclosure to the Philippine Stock Exchange.

"In due event a definitive agreement is concluded, an appropriate disclosure shall be made in the exchange," Ray MONTOR added.

On the other hand, PAL said in its disclosure that "there is presently no discussion on possible investments by Ray MONTOR Corp. in PAL Holdings Inc."

While SMC is said to be interested in the airline operations of PAL Holdings subsidiary, Philippine Airlines, it is uncertain whether the conglomerate's investment will reach the parent company level.

A Night of Celebration for Globe's Number One Customers

(The Globe Business Annual Appreciation Night)

For Globe Telecom, there's a time to work... and a time to party.

This is exactly what happened on December 7, 2011 at the Manila Shangri-La Hotel for the Annual Appreciation Night. Globe executives and customers got together to forget about work-related stuff and just enjoy a night filled with delicious food, drinks and great parties.

The event was hosted by Edu Verzosa and Venus Raj, who certainly raised the energy of the crowd as the night went on. There were also amazing performances by Kyla Lasterias, Maki Gil, Marikil Giron, Sika A, and Jaya that made the night even more exciting.

The event was graced by the presence of Globe Telecom's Chairman of the Board, Jaime Augusto Zobel de Ayala and his President and COO Ernest L. Cu with senior executives. HKT Head Ricardo Ibar and Globe Business Head Jesus C. Reyes Jr. also when they much enjoyed the night of appreciation and fun with their top customers.

These celebrations are a leg up of the Appreciation Night held in Davao last November 28, 2011 and Cebu last December 1, 2011. We look forward to a more fun-filled night and also looking forward next year to another celebration like no other!
